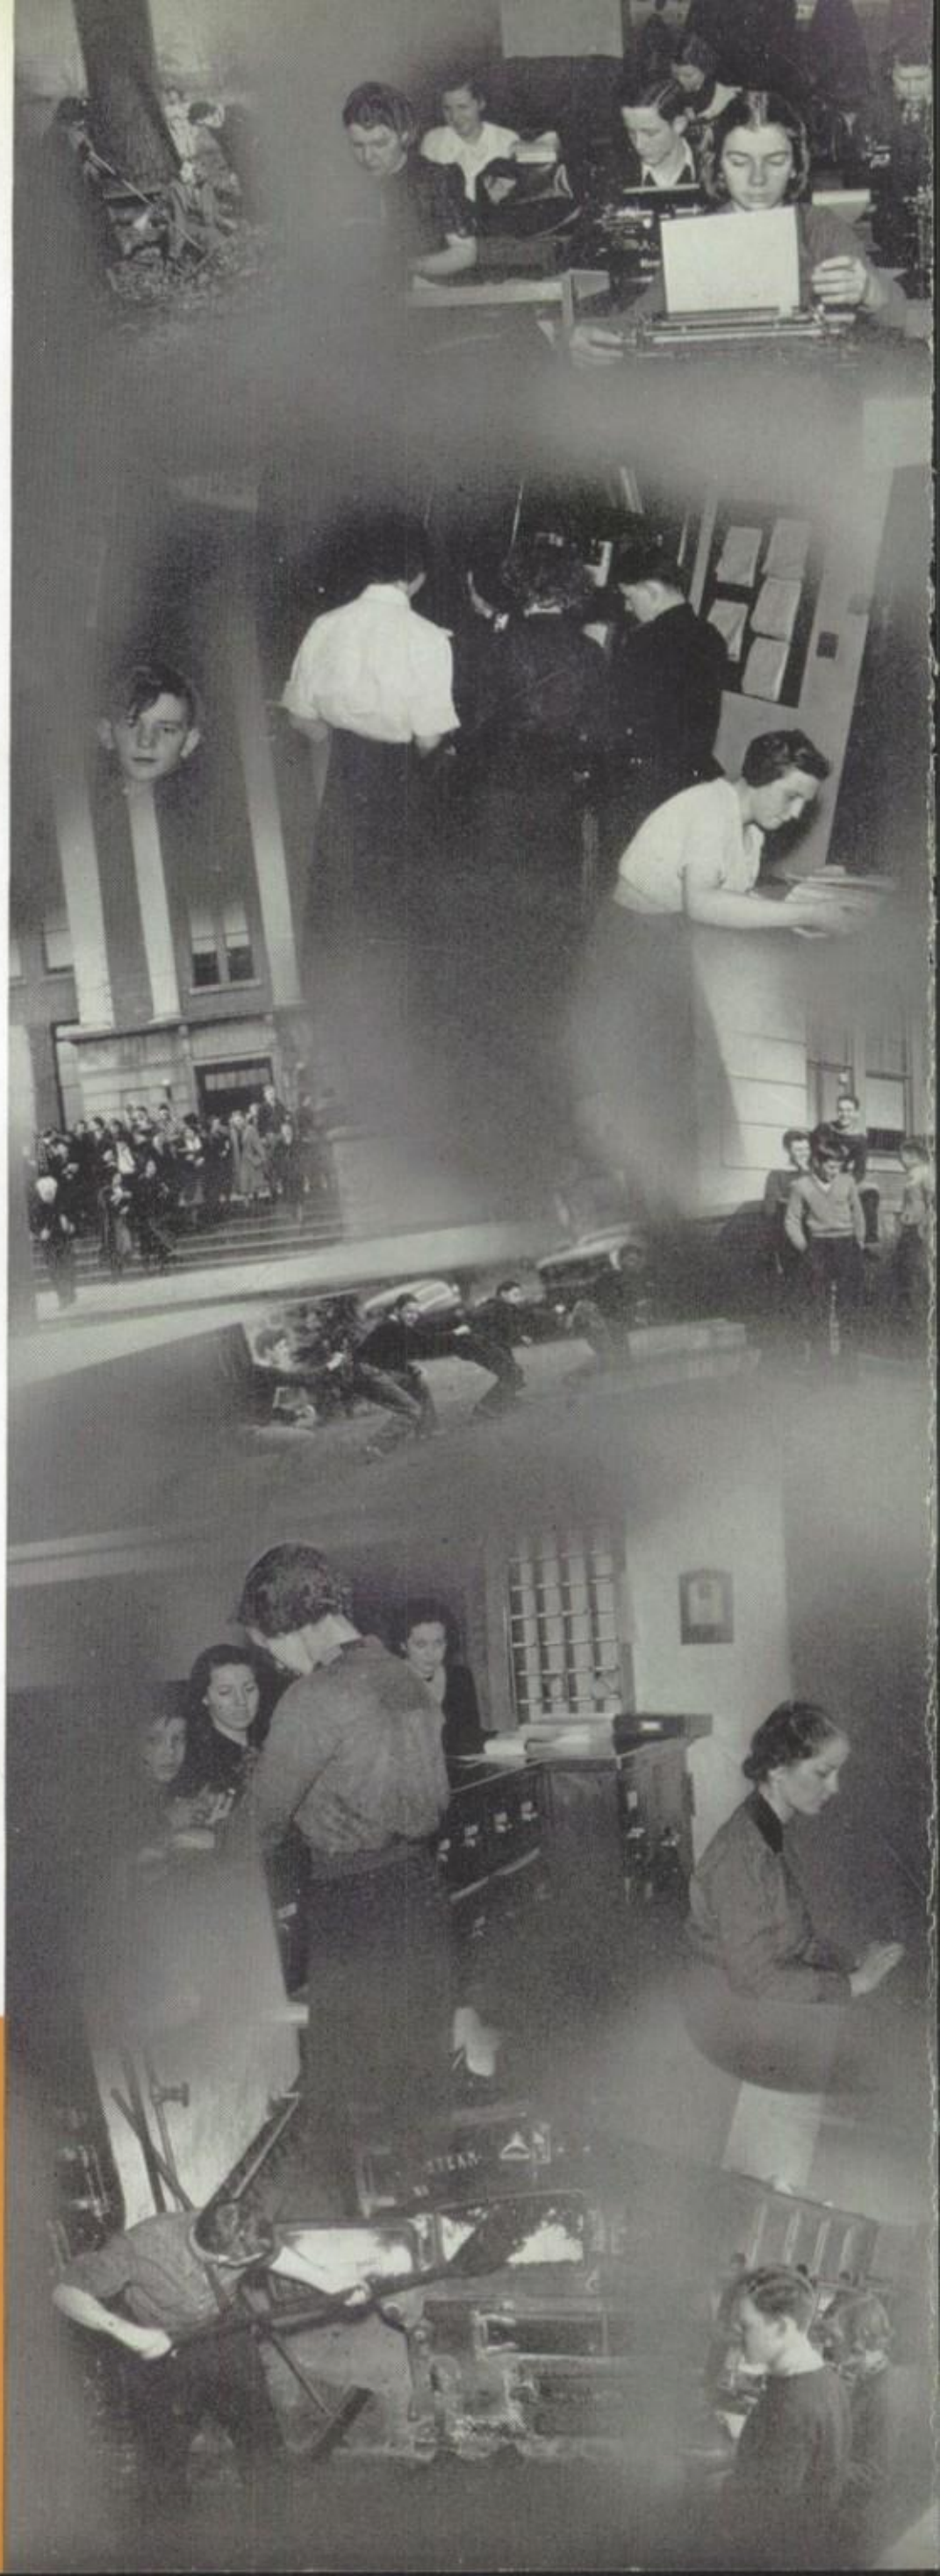
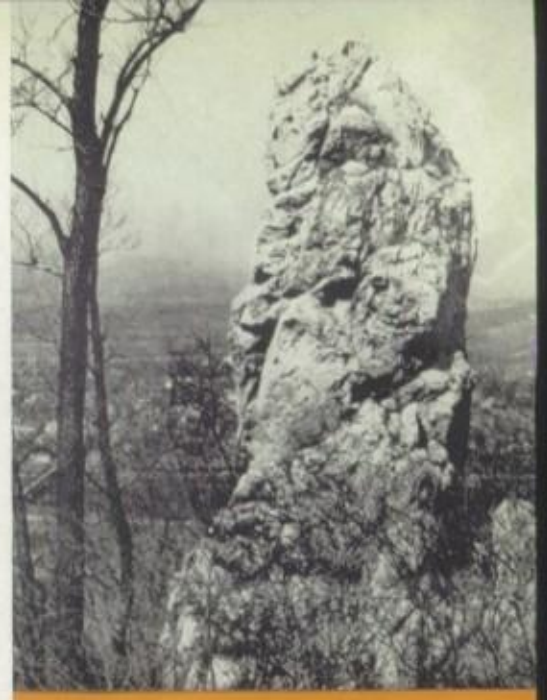
We Present





The CHIMROCK

NINETEEN HUNDRED THIRTY-SEVEN

A PICTORIAL RECORD IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF THE HAPPENINGS AND EVENTS OF THE YEAR AT HOLLIDAYSBURG HIGH SCHOOL, HOLLIDAYSBURG, PENNA.

We Salute

LEMMON C. STOUDNOUR

Friend and Counselor

whom we honor by dedicating this, the fourteenth annual edition of the Chimrock.

Mr. Stoudnour, as adviser of the debating and Hi-Y clubs and through his teaching and example, has led and inspired us to seek the worth-while things in life.

THE YEAR

AUTUMN -- WINTER -- SPRING

It is our purpose in this, the fourteenth edition of the Chimrock, to depict the happenings of our 1936-'37 school year as they come to pass.

We have presented those activities which extend throughout the entire school year in the season in which their greatest activity occurs.

The Board of Education

BOOKS, bonds, taxes, teacher contracts, school laws, and policies —these are only a few of the many things that demand the attention of the Board of Education in order to keep the Hollidaysburg School System in smooth working order.

Very few people realize just what being a member of the Board involves. Every action of the Board is governed by the school code, which dictates what shall or may be done. The School Board members, who serve without compensation, must determine just what policies shall be followed in governing the schools. The tax millage rate must be determined to meet the needs of the budget, which must be carefully prepared. The purchase of supplies, such as coal, books, desks, brooms, pencils, tablets, and a host of other necessities requires diligent study by the Board. The personnel, to carry out the Board's policies, necessitates long hours of interviews.

The erection and maintenance of school buildings demand considerable attention. Plans, bond issues, and contracts cause the School Board much work and worry. Of the vast numbers of duties of the Board of Education we have cited a few to give you, the students, a knowledge of some of the things that must be done before the doors of any Hollidaysburg school open.

This Board is really the senate of our school government, made up of men who have willingly sacrificed time and energy the make our schools as good as any in the state. These men are elected by our parents and represent our parents in matters where our education and welfare are concerned. Through Hobson C. Wagner, our superintendent of public schools, their decisions and policies are carried out.

The seven members of the School Board are: John M. Snyder, Homer I. Smith, Harvey H. Hyle, John A. Matthews, Homer C. McKillip, William H. Wade, and J. W. Stitzel.

The minutes and business of each meeting are recorded by Miss Blanche M. Davis, secretary of the Board of Education.

The Administration

Superintendent Hobson C. Wagner dictates a letter to his secretary, Myrtle Showalter.

Guidance, tardiness and faculty meetings keep D. H. Loree, principal, a busy man.

And Our Faculty

LET me see your schedule. What courses are you going to take this year? Do you know what subjects the new teachers are going to teach? Problems such as these confront us each year, but we soon find the answers.

Schedules vary. Each of us must take four major subjects including English, mathematics, a science, a social study, and if we are commercial students, typing, bookkeeping, and shorthand are included. If we are interested, music, art, journalism or public speaking can be added to our daily schedule.

As we follow our schedule of classes from day to day we meet one of the following of the English department: the Misses A. Jones, Kemp, Reed, Ammon, Gearhart, Harpster or Meyers.

Messrs. Henshaw, G. Jones, Kearney and Mentzer explain to us such principles as heredity, erosion, electricity and other wonders of the scientific world. Our mathematicians, Misses Wilt and Swanson and Messrs. Chimente and Wolfe, help us as we flounder around in a swamp of planes and cubes.

Whenever we have a question about European, World, Early American or Government History, we find the Misses Treese and Berg or Messrs. Stoudnour, Wertz or Shellenberger willing to answer our question. For our Latin and French classes we report to Misses Smiley, Deen, or Ammon. Miss McIlroy and Miss Pickles take over the job of training us to be competent secretaries.

If our next class is music, we report to Mr. Thompson or Miss Harley. Miss Smith supervises us in art, while Miss Fitts trains us in home economics.

For reference work or for general reading Miss Melshiemer, librarian, is always willing to help. Miss Malone and Mrs. Halpern guard our health.

The Junior Class

WE FOUND the diary of a junior girl recently and while leafing through its pages we noticed the following excerpts concerning the junior class:

September: School again! Many schedules were badly mixed. I found myself in an eighth grade guidance class instead of history. Things around school have changed a lot. Now we have two-way traffic in the halls and worst of all, no early dismissals. The first football game is with Burnham. The juniors are doing their part, some on the field; some on the benches; and of course the rest are in the cheering section.

October: We elected officers. They were: President, Carl Kins; Vice-President, William Dunn; Secretary, Betty Burger; Treasurer, Jack Crites. Unlike other years, we have only one adviser, Miss Margery Reed. Our class is well represented in the band and orchestra. The first six-weeks tests are over. I've decided to get down to work.

November: On election day people would have thought we were voters. We had a regular campaign. The day for our class party arrived at last. I had a fairly good time. The president took it upon himself to invite the football team. As it was after the Huntingdon game they limped around and ate everything they could get. Mr. Loree seemed to have a good time. A baby show was given in chapel by a junior home room. All who took part were juniors. Some babies! Four juniors, Shirley Abelson, Hazel Diehl, Helen Gillette, and Anna Jean Harry, wrote and directed a play for parents' week entitled, "Today's Children."

December: The Girls' League play was given this month. Three junior girls took part, Joan Rooney having the leading feminine role. The girls of the class have caught the craze of sending for free samples. I pity the postman. Many journalism students are writing articles for the H-Burger. Christmas vacation at last. Everyone is happy! Seven junior journalists went to Hershey for the State Press Conference. Some of our shorthand students are beginning to be able to write shorthand as quickly as longhand.

January: New Year's Eve! Our juniors were up at the most surprising hours—of course, this was a special occasion. Here we are back at school, studying hard again. Our jolly algebra teacher, Mr. Diehl, has left. We feel "very unhappy." We got a new algebra teacher, Mr. Donald Wolf. Basketball season has begun. Mid-year tests. Did I, or did I not flunk? Time will tell.

February: Received our report cards. Some were decorated with red ink; others had blue marks in the high nineties. A good many students are writing to foreign correspondents—especially the girls. Of course, they are writing to boys. Many of our students are getting glasses. Is it caused by too much studying, or is it the after effect of the tests? The juniors won the "brain buster" contest given by the Honor Society. This proves that the junior class has the brains.

March: Track season has started and many of our boys are taking part. Eight juniors have been elected to the National Honor Society. They are: Shirley Abelson, Jack Crites, William Dunn, Betty Lois Edwards, Jeanne Fries, James Martz, Marjorie Suter.

No more notes, for the diary was lost after the above entry.

The Sophomore Class

GONE with the wind are last year's Freshmen and in their places stand this year's Sophisticated Sophomores.

For the climb that was daily growing steeper we had to have leaders, so we chose: President, Tom Yingling; Vice-President, Joe Delozier; Secretary, Bill Baronner, and Treasurer, Ray Gill.

If there was anything happening you could find the "Sophies" peppered around, for we didn't miss a thing. At the football games you found us in the band, George Funk, Max Hunter, and John O'Brien, shouting in the bleachers, and Tim Yingling fighting on the field. Our boys, Bill Barroner, Francis Winters and Russell Irvin, played basketball and we were well represented in track.

Yes, we're still in the balcony in assembly but we're proud to be there and if you look around in the orchestras you will find quite a few of us scattered there. Our clubs have been very much like those of last year but there was a certain thrill in being able to join ones in which there were juniors and seniors.

We were sometimes found working as well as enjoying the pleasures and recreations of our school. One cry very prevalent was, "Do you have your geometry done?" and the answer was usually, "No." But we struggled and came up smiling. Our teachers will probably remember how we haunted them for library passes and how hard it was to find pencils for everyone for there was always someone who didn't have one.

In our midst we have a poet, Clair Arford, whose ability has already won him recognition and some day we hope will win him fame.

Reading the H-Burger you found that the list of Sophomore honor students was long and outstanding. Among those of ten mentioned were Mary Ellen McGee and Jocelyn Walsh. We are the most versatile of all the High School classes. We have humor, we have drama and we are very, very mysterious. A light shining in the darkness, a bell at midnight, a faint moaning breaks the stillness. What is that I hear? Ah! just another poor Sophomore struggling over a notebook—due in the morning.

In the Girls' League play you found one of us, Lois Louther, as Mrs. Albergone, and we were represented in the Boys' League Minstrels.

In music we shine, for we have among us a fine pianist, Frances Reese, and many other talented musicians.

The fourth and seventh period study halls get us in a great deal of trouble for it seems we just can't work and we have so much to do. The Sophomores, being no exceptions, pass as many notes behind teachers' backs, we hope, as the others, and we get caught just as often. We are late to classes, miss as much school and also make as many excuses.

We think we have the most tolerant group of teachers that you will find anywhere and we realize it. They have to put up with a great deal, but they seem to think we are a grand crowd, and we know they are. We are just one big happy family that is striving to get ahead.

The Freshman Class

THERE were no shamrocks. There were no snakes. We were not on the Emerald Isle. It was not St. Patrick's Day.

Green flashed here and there, although we had none of the above characteristics. It was just the class of 1940 shadowing the doors of the Hollidaysburg High School on the first day of school. Every year this entrance occurs, but on this particular day we began to make a unique history which would be recorded in the immortal annals of the school.

How anxious and excited we were! Some of us were dubious of directions; some animated with our new surroundings; and some were just conscious of another school year to be lived only in a different class.

Contrast the difference of appearance and attitude that displays itself now with that shown the first day in the 1936-1937 school year.

We must give credit and appreciation to the persons who made possible this amazing transformation.

First of all came our class officers in the persons of Homer Winter, President; Nancy Hamil, Vice-President; Barbara Bouton, Secretary, and Kenneth Bingham, Treasurer. Second in consideration we place our class adviser, Walter A. Kearney, on our roll of honor. Last but not least it is fitting to congratulate our upperclassmen for the admirable cooperation given us in adjusting ourselves to our environment. We tried to ignore the appellation of "greenie" and the few initiations that we had to undergo, but all such things, we found, pass with time and work.

As we enumerate the activities of our successful year, it cannot be said that we were inert. Action in many ways is the quality we are glad to possess and honor.

Football season opened to find us in the bleachers to sing and cheer for H-Burg. Representatives of the H-Burger and yearbook drives were not long in finding their way to our homerooms, where they secured a splendid response from our class as a whole. Our success in being the first class to pay for its picture in the Chimrock shows the ability of the class members to be punctual in meeting their obligations.

The season for basketball brought out our interest in indoor sports, and we portrayed much enthusiasm by helping to fill the sidelines with loyal rooters.

Then came the social event we all had anticipated. Our class party! What a grand time we had! In addition to a program in the auditorium, we had games in various rooms, and dancing in the main corridor. Needless to say, all of us enjoyed the lunch that followed.

We always did our share in attending the plays, the operetta, and all other projects sponsored by our fellow schoolmates.

In track season we freshmen were eager to show our speed with our feet and strength of body. Pole-vaulting, discus throwing, and broad jumping all seemed impossible at first, but with practice came perfection.

As to our musical capabilities, it was amazing how we took with fascination to the "voice of emotions." After one year of study we were almost positive of admittance to one of the orchestras or the band, which would be an honor as well as a service to the school.

There is hardly any field of extra-curricular activities that we did not take part in even to the winning of laurels for being great friends to everyone.

The Eighth Grade

TIME marches on! As time marches on, so does the growth of the Class of 1942. In one short year we have grown from the state of bewilderment and awe that gripped us as pupils of the seventh grade to become a group of leaders in the Junior High School division of Hollidaysburg High. No longer do we have an inferiority complex, for no longer do the upper classmen regard us as the babies of the school. Now we are seen as a group of thriving, intelligent boys and girls who are destined to make a fine record in the school history.

Under the capable leadership of Welling Graul, class president, and the other officers—Peggy Wolfe, vice president; Naomi Brua, secretary; John Woodcock, treasurer we have met the challenges presented to the class and have acquitted ourselves nobly. We have shown by the number of our group on the honor roll that we have met the scholastic challenge. In athletics we have supported the teams of the school and have also organized our own class basketball team of which we are justly proud.

EIGHTH GRADE OFFICERS

The H-Burger and Chimrock subscription drives found our group willing to support any worth-while activity sponsored by the school. The school plays, "Tweedles" and "The Tower Room Mystery," and the Boys' League Minstrel helped to prove that we are not merely interested in one type of activity, for once again members of our group were found in the audiences seeing the above-mentioned performances. It is our ambition to be the performers in the productions in the near future. Four members of our group are in the school orchestra and one of the group is in the school band.

We are justly proud of the fact that our class has met its obligations when due. We were the second class, the Freshman Class being first, to pay for having the class picture printed in the year-book. In order to stimulate promptness in the payment of dues to meet our obligations we had a contest among the eighth grade home rooms. Room 204 was the victor over rooms 201 and 202. In addition to the class as a whole meeting its obligations on time, the individual members of our class were prompt in paying the Chimrock installment payments when due.

We are rapidly becoming worthy members of our school society. Through our activities we are learning self-discipline. Our class has developed to the point where we no longer need a teacher to tell us just what we are to do every minute as it was when we were in the seventh grade. Through the training received in our school activities we expect to become worthy citizens of the community and nation. The spirit of cooperation and sacrifice has been stressed in our school life and we have exemplified that the lessons have taken root by answering the appeal made by the Red Cross for funds to aid the flood sufferers. We are proud that we were able to help our fellow men in time of distress.

Since we have met our challenges so well this year we are looking forward to the school year of 1937-'38, when through the reorganization of our school we will become the highest ranking class. We expect to warrant the ranking by deeds as well as class position.

Time marches on! The Class of 1942 will continue to grow.

SEVENTH GRADE OFFICERS

The Seventh Grade

"GREAT oaks from little acorns grow." That was the dominating thought and spirit of the youngest class of the high school this year. We were determined to fight our way to success regardless of what we undertook to do. Ambition, courage and "stick-to-itiveness" were the qualities that carried us to victory.

Our officers—Mary Garner, president; Jean Metzler, vice-president; John Stultz, secretary; Jean Marks, treasurer; were leaders worthy of the name. At all times did our leaders keep our class working harmoniously for the well-being of the entire group.

New problems and new faces gave us much to think about as members of the Junior High School. Instead of the usual thirty-five or forty we now have one hundred and six members in our class. Hillcrest, Stultz and Gaysport buildings each sent students to make up this group. In addition we have three representatives from the local parochial schools.

We enjoyed meeting and becoming friends with students from the various elementary schools. Our new classmates have stimulated us to do better work. Competition has become keener and we feel that we have benefited by our new associations.

Our class was divided between two homerooms—205 and 211—and as a result a friendly rivalry sprang up between the two rooms. Room 205 won the major contest of the year which was held to stimulate the payment of class dues so that we would have money enough to pay for our class pictures in the year-book. The Chimrock being something new to us, we were very proud to have our class represented in the book.

Although we did not have much opportunity to take part as members of the various activities of the school, we did try to lend both our moral and financial support to each activity. Many of our group subscribed to the H-Burger, the school newspaper, and also the Chimrock, the school's annual publication. We cheerfully bought tickets to the plays and other entertainments, as we did not want to miss any opportunity to see our older schoolmates perform. At the football and basketball games we were well represented in the cheering sections.

Our first year in the junior high department of our school has been one of considerable bewilderment and confusion but as the acorn slowly becomes an oak we, too, are beginning to develop and see light.

Our class adviser, Miss Martha Gearhart, has been a wise counselor and friend and at all times she has been sympathetic and willing to help us solve our problems. Just as the acorn and then the oak have received nourishment from the rain and sunshine which have caused it to grow into a mighty tree, our class has received words of counsel and sympathy from our homeroom and our classroom teachers which are having their effect on us. Our state of bewilderment, so obvious to all the first of the year, has rapidly been replaced by one of confidence. No more do we have to ask help for every trivial problem. No more do we have to be told not to do this or not to do that. We have earnestly striven to become the type of students of Hollidaysburg High that we ought to be—students worthy of the name gentleman and scholar.

Coaches Chimente and Mentzer pose

We Win Many Football Victories

"KEEP low; keep your head up; follow your interference; keep your feet on the ground; shift the ball!" Such were some of the oft-repeated commands of Coaches Vince Chimente and Dick Mentzer in preparing their charges for the 1936 season.

Continually the coaches instilled in the hearts and minds of their players bits of advice and a fighting spirit that carried the team through the 1936 campaign with only one defeat marked against them.

Before the opening of the season, even the most optimistic fan could not see success for H-Burg in the games to come. "Too light and inexperienced," he would say. But Coaches Chimente and Mentzer, used Haller, Pressel, and Gifford, the only lettermen remaining from the championship 1935 team, as a nucleus around which they built a team that won its games because of fighting spirit and team cooperation.

In every game the Tigers were outweighed. In fact, in the Huntingdon, Franklin Borough, Mt. Union, and Philipsburg games they spotted the opposition as much as ten pounds to a man but still went out and won.

Their fighting spirit was contagious and the fans were loud in the praise of the team, soft in rebuke. The town people supported this team as they had supported none before, and even at away games the majority of fans who attended were loyal rooters of the blue and white.

As a result of their fine team play and individual performance, Haller, Pressel, and Gifford were chosen on practically every All Western Conference team picked at the end of the season. The summary of the season is as follows:

Opening the season with Burnham, a newcomer to Dysart Park, the Golden Tigers had little trouble in overcoming their opponents. After scoring once in each period of the first half, the local eleven came back strong in the second half to pile up four more touchdowns and to gain a 39-0 advantage by the time the final gun sounded.

When one considers it was the first game on the schedule, the H-Burg gridders played well. Repeatedly they tore huge gaps in the opponent's line and sent an elusive halfback through the hole for a substantial gain. The defensive play of Coach Chimente's team, however, could have been better.

The Burnham High team waged a spirited battle, even in defeat, and though badly outplayed, they never ceased trying.

The second game of the year found the Burg eleven meeting the strong Franklin Borough gridders at Dysart Park.

Spotting the Blue Jays eight pounds to the man, the Chimentemen were forced to the utmost to gain a 14-0 victory over their Cambria county opponents.

After receiving a punt on his own forty-yard line, Tom Yingling, aided by the brilliant blocking of his teammates, ran sixty yards for the first 'Burg touchdown. Late in the third period, Pax Gifford intercepted a pass deep in his own territory, and with the rest of the Golden Tigers doing a bit of excellent blocking, managed to elude the safety man and to register Hollidaysburg's second score.

The offensive and defensive play of the locals had considerably improved over the first game and their showing in this contest gave indications of a winning club.

The Golden Tigers, with two wins already tucked under their belts, clashed with the gridmen from Bellwood in the third night contest for the locals.

In the opening period the H-Burg eleven opened up their bag of tricks and scored twice. The second period found them scoring the third touchdown of the game, climaxing a sustained drive from midfield.

After the rest period between halves the 'Burg attack no longer seemed to function properly, the Bellwood line repeatedly smearing Hollidaysburg back behind the scrimmage line. On one occasion a reverse play completely fooled the opposition, and John Brenner raced twenty-five yards down the sidelines to chalk up the final score for the Chimente eleven.

After playing three games at home, the local eleven traveled to Ebensburg to encounter the Red and Black of Ebensburg in a night game.

A year before the Ebensburg squad had given the Golden Tigers the only blemish on their record, a 7-7 tie, and the Chimentemen were out for revenge.

The first quarter found H-Burg using all their power and deceptiveness in an attempt to push over a score. After being stopped twice inside the twenty-yard line, the 'Burg gridmen finally tallied for their first and only score. Earl Pressel, acting captain, booted the extra point from placement. This point later proved to be the deciding factor of the game.

In the latter part of the second period, an alert Ebensburg lineman recovered a Burg fumble and later the Ebensburg gridders converted the break into a score. The very important try for extra point was missed when Pax Gifford batted down a pass to leave the score H-Burg 7, Ebensburg 6.

When the final gun sounded the score was still 7-6. Neither team could do anything in the final half as most of the playing was done in midfield.

Union eleven it was a clash of undefeated teams, as Mt. Union also had a clean slate.

The game was played at Dysart Park in a drizzle of rain. During the entire first half neither team could score. Four times in the opening half the Chimentemen's attack carried them down inside the Trojans' twenty-yard line, only to be repulsed when success seemed near.

After the intermission ended the Hollidaysburg eleven again took the offense. One scoring chance was nullified by the fumble on Mt. Union's five-yard line. The Tigers kept trying and finally, with third down, six yards to go for a first down on the opponents' eight-yard line, a large hole was made in the center of the Trojans' line. Halfback Carl Kins cut through this gap to score a touchdown standing up, the only one of the game. Score: Hollidaysburg, 6, Mt. Union 0.

Playing their first daylight game, Hollidaysburg Golden Tigers upset the Mountaineers of Philipsburg High at Philipsburg by a 13-0 score. The contest from the start was hard and rough, with a scoreless tie until the closing minutes of the fourth period when Coach Chimente's proteges unleashed a spectacular scoring attack and put over two touchdowns in rapid succession. For three periods the H-Burg grid machine had troubles. Then, in the middle of the fourth and final quarter, Kins intercepted a Philipsburg pass on his own eight-yard line and raced ninety-two yards for a touchdown, but the play was called back because of clipping from the rear. This tough break seemed to inspire the 'Burg eleven; several plays later Gifford faded back and threw a thirty-five yard pass to Winters for the first score. With only a few minutes remaining, the Golden Tigers skirted right end, tallying the second 'Burg touchdown.

Undefeated in six starts, the Hollidaysburg eleven encountered Shade Township, a team new on Hollidaysburg's schedule. The field was muddy and the footing slippery, consequently neither team could show much deceptive football. Coach Vince Chimente's men entered the game with the hope of having a slight let-up in preparation for the all-important Tyrone game on the following Wednesday, but they were granted no respite from their usually hard competition. Starting the game as heavy favorites, the locals were forced to extend themselves to upset the Shade Township delegation who, though defeated, played more spirited football than the Golden Tigers. The final sound of the gun found the Burg had overcome their opponents, 16-0.

With all their games registered in the win column, the Hollidaysburg gridders journeyed to Gray Memorial Field at Tyrone for the annual Armistice Day gridiron encounter.

Late in the first quarter, Ammerman, stellar Tyrone back, broke loose for a sixty-seven-yard gain that put the pigskin on H-Burg's seventeen-yard line. Two plays later a flat pass from Ammerman to Snyder gave Tyrone's Golden Eagles a touchdown and six points. Conversion of the extra point made the score Tyrone 7, H-Burg 0.

In the second quarter the 'Burg attack began to function. A fifty-yard sustained drive netted the Golden Tigers six points, but the try for extra point was blocked.

The second half found Hollidaysburg trying desperately to score, and Tyrone trying just as hard to protect their one-point lead. Although Coach Chimente's men could gain plenty of yardage, they could not progress after reaching Tyrone territory.

Coming back strong after the defeat by Tyrone, the H-Burg gridders redeemed themselves by outscoring the heavy Huntingdon team, 19-13, in the final game of the season.

The Bearcats had things very much their own way in the first quarter when they registered their first score, but from that time the Golden Tigers dominated the play.

A pass, Kins to Haller, gave the 'Burg its first score late in the second quarter. In the third period, Quarterback Gifford broke loose twice for runs of over sixty yards that ended in the pay-off territory. Huntingdon scored their second and last touchdown in the final stanza when they blocked a punt in the end zone.

We Publish The H-Burger

DURING the year 1936-'37 we certainly had a fine time publishing the twelve issues of Volume X of the H-Burger. Although we had a small staff, only eight members, we got our issues out in record time. We adopted as our proteges the struggling young journalists and greatly appreciated their help in writing for the school paper.

This year we had the good luck of having a five-column paper, two columns larger than that of last year. Because of this, however, it was necessary for us to go to school six days a week instead of the usual five. Every Saturday morning at nine o'clock we were composing our articles in room 106. We really didn't mind, though, because we had many good times.

We did more than just gather news; we attended several interesting press conferences. The biggest moment, or should I say two days, in our journalistic life was when we went to the Pennsylvania Scholastic Press Association convention at Hershey. Several staff members and correspondents, accompanied by Miss Dorothy E. Harpster, faculty adviser, and Walter A. Kearney, faculty business manager, had an eventful and exciting stay in Hershey.

Several of us also represented Hollidaysburg at the two meetings of the Blair County Scholastic Press Association. Hollidaysburg was host at one of the largest conferences the organization has ever had. The spring convention was held at D. S. Keith Junior High School in Altoona. Staff members also went to State College during the spring convention held by the Department of Journalism.

Harold Kunsman, Marjorie Mattern, Dorothy Ritchey, and Hugh Selwitz, four ardent members of the staff, were chosen as members of the honorary society, Quill and Scroll.

Perhaps you would like to know who all had these exciting adventures. First there was Jean Ruggles, who, being front page editor, found all the news that was news; then, as the second page editor, we had Erma Helsel, who certainly worked hard to get variety on her page; our lively sports editor was none other than Harold "'Cheesy" Kunsman, and last but not least of the page editors was Marjorie Reed. Next we find Dorothy Ritchey, the copy editor, who was kept busy correcting the mistakes, while our exchange editor, Marjorie Mattern, kept us in touch with the other schools. All our business affairs were capably handled by Hugh Selwitz and his assistant, John Matthews. All these people are dignified seniors.

We Watch The Band Drill

MARCHING across the field five abreast to the martial strains of the H-Burg fight song, the High School Band, consisting of twelve trumpets, eleven clarinets, seven trombones, seven French horns, four basses, four drums, two flutes and one saxophone, all playing as a unit, quickly forms the initial of the opposing school as it comes to a halt before the visitors' bleachers. Honoring their opponents, the musicians play a stirring march followed by the Alma Mater of the visitors. A shrill blast from the whistle of high-stepping Nelson Steele, the drum major, and once again the band falls into marching formation and marches to the front of the Hollidaysburg cheering section, where it plays the Alma Mater, after forming an H in honor of the local athletes and the school.

The execution of these drills as accomplished by the band comes only after long hours of practice in marching and playing. When the football team is practicing on the field and the other students have gone home or to the movies, the members of the band may be found on the school grounds, learning to execute new drills, or in the music room, learning to play new marches.

Rain or shine, the band is always present to inspire the athletes on to victory and to lead the students in song. The band also travels with the team to provide inspiration on foreign fields. This year the Ebensburg, Philipsburg, and Tyrone fans heard the martial tunes played by our band.

Playing at football games isn't the only time the band appears. During the year the band gives several concerts and participates in several contests. For instance, on March 15 and March 17 the band played in the junior and senior assemblies. On March 28 some of the members played at the Easter Sunrise Service.

Dwight Stuckey, John O'Brien, Ralph Sellers and Harold Caltabaugh went to Canton, Pennsylvania, for three days to take part in the All District Band Festival.

Behind all the efforts of the band is Cyrus D. Thompson, director of music. Mr. Thompson arranges for the concerts, prepares the programs, and sees that the band has transportation for trips that the band makes during the year. The Pennsylvania Music Association has honored Mr. Thompson by making him the treasurer of their group.

The concert given during Music Week brings the activities of the band to a fitting climax each year.

We Celebrate Tenth Anniversary

FOR ten years the girls of our high school have been meeting on the first Thursday of every month in the auditorium, planning programs and discussing the various problems of the clubs.

This year, as in the past years, we elected officers to preside at each meeting of the Girls' League; Sally Ling was chosen to be president, with Peggy Wolfe vice-president; Mary Ellen McGee, secretary, and Joan Rooney as treasurer. With these officers and our advisers, Miss Treese and Miss Ammon, we set out to make the tenth anniversary of the Girls' League a banner year.

Looking backward, we find we have obtained our goal! Each club has put forth extra effort to make their club the best, and thus we have better monthly meetings.

In one of our meetings we had the spring style show staged by the Vocational Club and the senior girls' sewing class. Many very chic gowns were made and modeled by the participants themselves under the supervision of Miss Fitts. Also, the Dramatic Club, under the direction of Miss Reed, entertained us. They presented an amusing playlet, "The Scientist." These are a few examples of the programs, which helped to make each meeting a success.

To top the preceding events was the main feature of the year — the annual Girls' League play, "Tweedles," which, judging from the applauding of the audience, was a huge success.

Another worthwhile activity of the Girls' League is the maintaining of a sum of money as a student loan fund. The senior girl who receives the loan is elected by a group of citizens of the town. With the loan of the money the girl is able to further her education.

And now, with the ending of this school year, as Mary Ellen McGee records the last meeting, and Joan Rooney balances her book, wherein she has registered the business activities of the Girls' League for the whole year, we blow out the candles from that mammoth cake of success. In the vanishing smoke we see service, cooperation, and success.

Phunology Club

DID you have a good time at the party, Jane?

No, I did not Mary. I really thought it was boring. I never seem to enjoy myself at parties. Did you enjoy yourself?

I honestly had a grand time, Jane. I like to go to parties and I have so much fun when I give a party myself. Join the Phunology Club and you will enjoy parties too.

It has been the purpose of the Phunology Club to help the girls like Jane to learn how to entertain and be entertained. Some of the aims of the club have been to create leadership in conducting entertainments in the home, church, school, or on the playground; to study games for all types of occasions; to learn the type of refreshments to serve at different functions; to study types of decorations, programs and invitations. The club has also endeavored to create a spirit of play and the ability to follow, among its members, for without these two, all individuals will be just like Jane after attending any social function. The fact that one must enter into the spirit of a game, regardless of what it is, to really enjoy that game was stressed at various club meetings

The club had the experience of trying to raise funds for the expense of having purchased a page in the Chimrock. During the sale of tickets for the Girls' League Play, the club members worked diligently to sell as many as possible as this club, as well as the other clubs, got a percentage of the money turned over to the business manager. Sue Funk proved to be the number one saleslady of the organization.

The officers of the club for the first semester were as follows: Audrey Shaw, president; Sue Funk, vice-president; La Rue Croft, secretary; Betty Jane Barnett, treasurer; Grace Diehl, chaplain. During the second semester the respective offices were held by Sara Hite, Louise Wagner, Eunice Oakes, Pauline Shaffer, and Allene Stewart.

After a year spent as members of the Phunology Club the girls of this organization believe that they will now know how to entertain and be entertained.

Art Appreciation Club

GIRLS, do you know that you have all been "typed" and classified like so many little insects by a headstrong group that called itself the Art Appreciation Club? Well, it's true—you have been! Each one of you comes under one of three types—the Classical, the Romantic, or the Independent. Those club members have figured it all out! Any one of them can size you up at a glance, tell you what type you are, how you should dress, and how you should act.

That was part of the business of this new club. It spent much time working out the characteristic of these three types of women and planned color schemes, fabric designs, new costumes, and clever hair-do's that will be suitable for each type.

But that was only a small part of what they did this year. A better appreciation of the finer things was the aim of the group and so they made one of their projects teach them how to use good taste in selecting clothes, furniture, interior decorations, fixtures and other articles which make a home beautiful.

They also took up the study of art in the Theatre. This included stage setting, draping, costuming and the countless other things which make the legitimate stage so wonderful today. Some of their ideas were kept in attractive notebooks of their own design.

There was also a little trend toward psychology within this versatile group. They made an extensive study of color. And maybe you think colors are not important! If you only knew the queer effects it has on your nervous system you would be a great deal more careful about choosing the color schemes of your clothes.

Of course, every good club has officers. Mary McKillip was elected president, Priscilla Barnett, vice-president, and Eleanor Smith, secretary-treasurer.

To raise the money to pay for the picture of us that you see above, we held an auction sale at one of our meetings. It was a lot of fun and proved a very effective means of earning money.

W. B. A. Club

DRAMATIC Artistry! Elocution! Oratory! Join the W. B. A. club and learn the fundamental principles of the above. Groups were here and there depicting dialect poetry; other students were cultivating their talents so that some day you or I may see them on the legitimate stage, or maybe in the cinema. There was a place for every student within the group; some studied make-up intently, others studied the stage in general, but each one dramatized from time to time.

The students worked as a unit and there were many projects of dramatic worth which had to be completed during the years work. Activity in dramatic development was one of the aims of the club.

The first few meetings were devoted to training the student in poise, voice, and general stage conduct.

Make-up was the next step to be taken in any dramatic group. We learned how to create character parts, juvenile parts, and how to blend colors to create races of other nationalities.

It is the desire of every student to act on the stage in some capacity. Within the club, opportunity was afforded each girl, who, during the year, was permitted to accept as many parts as time allowed. The plays were of a varied type; such as comedies, tragedies, fantasies and melodramas.

We also sponsored a project of dialect poetry. The girls selected a poem representative of some foreign country. This year the dialect types were Scotish, Japanese, Italian, French, Spanish, German, Scandinavian, and Irish.

The remaining weeks were devoted to general dramatic discussion. Dramatic crtitcism played a part in the final project of the W. B. A. club.

The club consisted of twenty-eight members from the Junior and Senior home rooms.

In early organization, Louise Haller was chosen to lead the various activities. Mildred Blake presided in the absence of the president. Alice Jane Stultz was elected as Secretary-Treasurer and Janis Krelitz as chaplain.

The W. B. A. club concluded with a most successful year and with the aid of the coming Juniors and Seniors, it will continue as successful under the worthy leadership of Miss Jones and Miss Kemp.

Dramatic Club

TIME: March 4. Place: Girls' League. Event: The Scientist. As the curtain rose on the play, we beheld Peggy Smith as the hero in the role of scientist. She successfully won the love of the heroine, Clare Gorsuch. Due to the excellent supporting cast which included Loretta Kunsman and Marian Dougherty, and with the help and inspiration of our advisers, Miss Reed and Miss Myers the play was quite a success.

The splendid co-operation of the girls with their group leaders and advisers deserves note. This group work made successful productions of many plays possible.

The latter part of the year a more informal program was followed. Certain members volunteered to choose a cast and direct a play. This plan afforded each girl the opportunity of doing the type of work in which she had the greatest interest. She could direct a play, plan the stage properties, or take the part of one of the characters in a play.

The main source of our material was "All American University One Act Plays."

Our leaders for the first semester were: President, Barbara Rifenbary; vice-president, Eva Mae Treese; secretary-treasurer, Marjorie Lotz; chaplain, Peggy Smith. By popular vote of the girls new officers were selected for the second semester. These were: President, Marian Dougherty; vice-president, Mary Ellen Drass; secretary-treasurer, Loretta Kunsman; chaplain, Helen Louise Rooney.

The club had debts to pay and these were met by having a bake sale. Even though everyone co-operated we did not quite make enough money to meet the expenses. Additional funds were obtained through the sale of tickets for the Girls' League play "Tweedles."

Now the year is over and as we look back on the work of our Dramatic Club we find that perhaps we have not gained so much as far as actual knowledge is concerned, but we have gained much from the companionship of our fellow students. With the latter and a little information gained on how to speak, sit, and walk before an audience we feel that after the Dramatic Club there should be marked in capital letters the word SUCCESS.

Junior Dramatic Club

"I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano,
A stage where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one."

Unlike Antonio in the "Merchant of Venice," the members of the Junior Dramatic Club played many merry parts in their activities of the present year. Because of the nature of the matter and its special appeal to young people, dramatics offer a very definite opportunity for personal development. This year the twenty girls who belonged to the club did some very earnest work.

As all good clubs should, the Junior Dramatic Club had a definite purpose, which was to learn something about dramatics by studying plays and acting them. During the year we used as a guide to our work "The Stage and the School" by Katharine Anne Ommanney, a book which is one of four purchased by the club and placed in the school library.

As in former years, the work of the first semester was given over largely to the study of posture, voice, diction, and breath control as aids in dramatization. We also studied pantomime as the basis of characterization, ending our study of this phase of the work by pantomiming what we wanted most for Christmas.

During the second semester we studied the art of make-up, correct stage terminology, and the types of drama. At various meetings members gave reports of plays seen since the previous meeting. These reports were then discussed by the group.

To afford practice in dramatics we were entertained at each meeting by plays under the direction of some member of the club. Each girl had the opportunity to act as chairman of the program committee at least once, while every member co-operated in the preparation of the programs to be presented. Constructive criticism was then made. Thus in our work we have tried to develop a critical judgment of plays that will result in the ability to recognize and appreciate the better types of plays.

Our officers were President, Dorothy Downing; Vice-president, Jean Metzler; Secretary, Doris Carberry; Treasurer, Margaret Hoover; Chaplain, Ethel Shaw; Adviser, Miss Gearhart.

Vocational Club

IT has been said that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. For this reason twenty-three senior girls reorganized the Vocational Club so that they, like the Northwest Mounted, might get their man.

The Vocational Club was again affiliated with the State and National Home Economics Associations. The main purposes of these organizations are, to develop the potential abilities of the girl; to promote the interests of Home Economics; and to give a broader vision of Home Economics.

To be eligible for a place on the state honor roll the different clubs belonging to the State and National Associations must meet seven requirements of the Standards of Excellence of Pennsylvania. Those clubs receiving recognition are presented with a certificate of award. The local club has once more fulfilled the requirements for the year and has been awarded a certificate.

"Personality Development" was the theme selected for programs by the club during this school year. All the work done by the club was with the view of helping each member develop a wholesome personality. Among the many interesting programs were those on etiquette, dress, teas and luncheons. One period was devoted to the evolution of dress and how dress tends to bring out an individual's personality.

Welfare work played quite a prominent part of the year's activity. The club prepared two baskets at Thanksgiving to be given to some less fortunate people. At Christmas time each club member brought a gift to be sent to some under-privileged child of the community. We have found that the sport of giving tends to develop one's personality as well as other things do.

As the year progressed the girls of the club became more proficient in the culinary arts and in homemaking in general. Miss Fitts, the club adviser, through her wise counsel and her training of the members has made the club a very worthwhile organization. Each meeting has found the group reluctant to leave the Home Economics Room to go to another class.

The officers were Sally Ling, president; Genevieve Evans, vice-president; Romayne Butler, secretary. Eileen Moyer, treasurer; Ruth Yeckley, chaplain.

Girl Reserves Club

"DON'T you think it would be interesting to extend the Girl Reserves Club to the High School?"

"Indeed I do. I think it would be a fine idea and I am willing to help all I can in the project. If it pleases you I will sponsor it myself."

This seemingly unimportant snatch of conversation between Miss Williams of the Y. W. C. A. and Miss Flora Smiley of the high school faculty was the beginning of the Girl Reserves Club in our school. The above conversation took place over a year ago and the Girl Reserves were established in the school at the beginning of the 1935-'36 school year.

The club adopted the aims of the national organization. These aims are given in the form of an acrostic, which is as follows:

Gracious in manner.
Impartial in judgment.
Ready for service.
Loyal to friends.
Reaching toward the best.
Earnest in purpose.
Seeing the beautiful.
Eager for knowledge.
Reverent to God.
Victorious over self.
Ever dependable.
Sincere at all times.

Alice Hoover, president; Margaret Lewis, vice-president; Leola Heilmeier, secretary, and Dolores George, chaplain, were the officers of the Girl Reserves for the second semester. Frances Weyant, Mary McCue, Gwendolyn Bousum, Shirly Young, and Sara Jane Walters held the respective offices for the first semester. These officers met regularly with the officers of the other clubs affiliated with the Y. W. C. A. to discuss club problems and to plan for entertainment and programs.

The Hallowe'en party given at the Y. W. proved to be the big social event of the year. The club also took part in the annual candlelight service held at the First Baptist Church on March 7.

Miss Williams of the Y. W. C. A. and Mrs. Irvin Davis, a former Y. W. C. A. secretary, spoke to the club during the course of the year.

Library Club

WHERE do you find history books in the library? What do the numbers on the books mean? These questions in addition to many others asked by students visiting the library formed the basis of work for the Library Club for the 1936-'37 school year.

The purpose of this club was to acquaint its members with the use of the library and also the management of one.

The girls of this club soon found that there is a responsible amount of work connected with the efficient management of a library. They soon learned that a definite system, the Dewey Decimal System, of classifying books is used in all libraries. The proper way to use the Card Catalogue index system was studied. Among other projects concerning library work, the girls learned how to prepare new books to be put on the shelves of the library.

The Library Club members learned that a librarian besides having a great amount of mechanical duties to perform must have a vast amount of knowledge concerning books of all types. In order to obtain information about books the embryo librarians used some of the club periods for the discussion of stories read. Special holidays were celebrated by reading material appropriate for the day.

Miss Mildred Melsheimer, the adviser, gave the club instructions on the repair of old books. Many periods one could see paste, rulers, scissors, adhesive cloth, and double stitch binder scattered over the tables in the library as the girls labored to make old and worn books look like new.

In addition to the work done in club period the members of the Library Club prepared notebooks in which they kept records on books they had read and also notes regarding the authors of the stories. Many notebooks were made very attractive by illustrating the stories with drawings and pictures.

Gladys Grove served the club in the capacity of president. Dorothy Smith acted as vice-president. For secretary the club chose the ever-efficient Betty Byrne. Helen Mae Hoover was elected to the office of treasurer and Kathleen Long was chosen to the office of chaplain.

Beginner's Knitting Club

CLICKING needles, the chattering of girls, and the usual confusion of a first meeting marked the opening of the Beginners' Knitting Club. Finally the uproar ceased and officers were elected. Anna Jean Harry was chosen president, Marjorie Runyeon vice-president, Ganelle Hollenback secretary-treasurer, and Helen Dively chaplain.

The Beginners' Knitting Club replaced the former Senior Craft Club. The members of the latter club decided they would rather learn to knit than to learn other forms of needlework, so the club was disbanded. Those girls who already knew how to knit were admitted into one or the other of the advanced knitting clubs, while those of the two advanced knitting clubs and the former members of the Senior Craft Club who knew very little about knitting formed the Beginners' Knitting Club.

As the name implies, the purpose of this club was to teach the essentials of knitting. In a very short time the members were able to make small articles such as scarfs, hats, pocketbooks, and even sweaters. More difficult stitches were practiced later in the year.

The majority of the club periods were spent in the instruction and practice of stitches. The first things taught were casting on stitches, a plain knitting stitch, purling, increasing, decreasing, and casting off. Once these fundamentals were mastered, knitting was no longer difficult.

The Beginners' Knitting Club upheld the reputation of the knitting clubs as having the best salesladies of the school, when they won the prize offered by the Girls' League to the club selling the greatest number of tickets to the play "Tweedles." The money won with additional funds raised by the club was used to defray the cost of having the club picture put in the Chimrock.

The success of the club can not be credited to the members alone. It was chiefly through the patience of Miss Mary Pickles, club adviser, that the club members progressed so rapidly in learning to knit. Teaching knitting requires an infinite amount of patience and Miss Pickles certainly had patience with the club members. Time and again she demonstrated some simple stitch to a girl until the girl mastered it.

Advanced Knitting Club

"MISS AMMON, have you seen the pair of mittens that Peggy just finished knitting?" asks Hazel Diehl as the Advanced Knitting Club once more meets and the members begin to busily knit one, purl one in their efforts to make some useful article for wear.

"They certainly are very well done," Miss Ammon replies and then passes the mittens around to the various members of the club for inspection. "It is this type of work that makes our club worth while," adds Miss Ammon as the girls examine the mittens.

The Advanced Knitting Club is an outgrowth of the original knitting club sponsored by the Misses Ammon and Harpster. As the name implies, only those who are more or less skillful in knitting are admitted to membership in the club.

At the first meeting officers were chosen to serve throughout the first semester. Harriett Kitzinger was elected to the office of president and Margaret Mary Madden that of vice-president. Joan Rooney was chosen to take care of devotions. Elizabeth Wallace became secretary-treasurer.

The question of how to raise funds to pay for the expenses of the club brought forth many suggestions from the club members, but none seemed practical. Miss Ammon suggested that the girls knit various articles for wear to be sold in order to raise the necessary money. It was agreed that neckties and caps would be knitted and sold by the club members. Each girl agreed to knit two articles from yarn which she furnished and then turn the proceeds from the sale of the articles over to the club. Jean Fries was the first member to hand in money for the articles she sold.

Almost anywhere in the school building you may see at some time or other clothing made by the ambitious young girls of this club during their leisure time. Who has not seen and admired the white sweaters worn by three Juniors who are members of this club?

Sweaters, skirts, scarfs, suits, neckties and hats and other wearing apparel, some done in intricate design, constitute the work of the club.

Progressive Knitting Club

"KNIT one, purl one" seems to be on every girl's lips as we hear their needles busily clicking. We are busy bees, we progressing knitters, but some day we hope to be advanced knitters.

This year Caroline Jackson made a hat; Mary Johnson, a scarf; Margie Treese, a suit, scarf, and hat—Margie is the busiest bee of us all; Emily Greaser, a blouse; Irene Weyant, a sweater; Gladys Wesley, a sweater; Virginia Nori, a sweater; Verna Moudy, a scarf; Mary Lauer, a sweater; Margaret Yingling, a scarf; Marjorie Suter, a sweater; Mary Catherine Woods, a tie.

Our adviser is Miss Dorothy E. Harpster.

We elected as our officers for the year: President, Isabell Nickum, '37; vice-president, Jayne Haller, '39; secretary-treasurer, Mary Catherine Woods, '38, and chaplain, Verna Moudy, '37.

To secure money to pay for our picture in the Chimrock we decided to collect the sum of one dime from each of our thirty-eight members, but this way didn't bring much money into our treasury, so we sold candy at the Senior Art Class "Puppet Show" on April 9.

In this club we not only knit, but hold discussions concerning the laundering of once-used yarn so that it can be used once more, the laundering of knitted clothes, and the winding of yarn.

Our adviser, Miss Harpster, has been kind in giving advice and instructions while we are knitting articles. Miss Harpster has shown us a few articles she has knit; a very practical article she knit is a pair of bed socks.

Girls, today, everywhere are knitting. Since 1930 it has been considered very smart to knit, and the girl who wears clothes she has knit herself is considered chic.

Knitting originated in the British Isles, the usual pattern used was the stocking-nett stitch, knit one, purl one—that is very popular in the making of sweaters lately.

This year we have taken the sneers given us by the advanced group, but next year we will perhaps be advanced knitters also.

Etiquette Club

ONE definition of etiquette gives us the following: "Rules of conduct observed in polite society or in official intercourse." We have found it important that one conduct herself in a manner that is acceptable to society. Before the rules of good conduct can be carried out it is necessary that one know them. It has been the purpose of the Etiquette Club to teach good manners, courtesy, and consideration for others.

Many topics of value in everyday life were discussed during the club meetings. The all-important problem of introductions was one topic of vital interest. If you have ever been embarrassed by failing to properly introduce new acquaintances, you can readily appreciate the value of a club that teaches just such things. Table manners, correspondence, and visiting were among the other topics presented.

Not only did we read and talk about the rules of conduct, but when practical, all the rules were enacted by various committees. The enactment of the rules gave us a clearer vision of what one should or should not do than if we had merely read and then discussed the rules.

The study of etiquette required some serious work, but there were many humorous moments. It was quite funny to see the club members portraying male characters, acting as waitresses, hostesses and other characters.

The two texts, "Everyday Manners" and "Emily Post," were used as reference works by the club members.

The Etiquette Club chose different officers to serve each semester of the school. The following were the officers the first semester: Helen Shoenfelt, president; Mary Ellen McGee, vice-president; Anna Ruth Dunmire, secretary-treasurer; Mary Dalesandro, chaplain, while Josephine Thomas, Pauline Crotzer, Mildred Wilt and Helen Stiffler filled the respective offices the second semester. Miss Gertrude Swanson acted as club adviser throughout the entire year.

A highlight of the club activities was the Christmas party held just before the holiday season. Presents were exchanged by the members by each paying for a grab bag. Some very amusing gifts were received. The money obtained was used to defray the cost of putting a picture in the Chimrock.

Junior Craft Club

THE old proverb, "A stitch in time saves nine," was brought to mind by the Junior Craft Club this year. The girls were taught thrift through handicraft. Crocheting, embroidering and tatting were so popular among the junior high girls that the club attained a membership of forty-five. When the Senior Craft Club disbanded some of its members continued the craft work by joining the Junior Craft Club.

The purpose of the club was to teach girls how to derive pleasure while making useful articles and how to be thrifty in so doing. Crocheted coin purses and gloves, tatted hankies and knitted scarfs and hats were among the things the girls of the club produced. A popular project was the making of rose petal dolls from crepe paper. The girls not only found pleasure in the making of the dolls and other articles, but derived the pleasure of giving them to their friends as Christmas gifts.

The Craft Club chose its officers for the first semester so wisely that the girls decided to maintain the same leaders for second semester. Roselyn Abelson was elected president. Roselyn kept the club working in perfect harmony throughout the year. Louise Preston acted as vice-president. Priscilla Gillette made a very efficient secretary. Priscilla always had her minutes correctly recorded and Nancy Brua, the treasurer, always had her books properly balanced. The Craft Club has been proud of its officers for 1936-'37.

The club was very fortunate in having as its adviser Miss Zoe Olla Wilt. Miss Wilt capably advised the girls with their problems and demonstrated to the club how to make many interesting and useful articles. Miss Wilt displayed infinite patience as she, time and again, helped clumsy fingers to manipulate needles in order that they might fashion artistic articles.

The members of the Junior Craft Club used their meetings for diligent work as each member soon saw the value of projects sponsored by the group. The club held a Hallowe'en party, and later the club took a supper hike as a diversion from work.

Commercial Sampler Club

IN A BOX of Whitman's Sampler one gets a taste of the various candies manufactured by that company. In the Commercial Sampler Club the girls who are members get a taste of all the different commercial practices that one meets when working in an office or a store.

It was the purpose of this club to act as an exploratory laboratory for girls from the junior high who expressed an interest in the commercial course offered by the school district.

Agnes Chingos, president; Rosella Herring, vice-president; Mary Gardner, secretary-treasurer, and Mary Myrtle Sellers acted as club officers for the first semester while Phyllis Alleman, Grace Hudson, Agnes Chingos and Betty Shroeder filled the various offices during the second semester.

The first project of the club was called "Know Your Town." During this project a survey was made of the town to learn the location, type of work, number of people employed in the various business and professional places in Hollidaysburg.

After the above-mentioned survey, the various qualifications found necessary for employment were discussed. Among the many qualifications found necessary for commercial workers was the ability to use the telephone. In order to meet this qualification the club was instructed in the use of the telephone. Long distance, emergency calls, appointments and social calls were practiced by all the members and the errors made were corrected. The ability to type was another qualification found necessary. The club watched the senior commercial students type and take dictation to get some idea of the work. Demonstrations were given by various members of the class to acquaint the club with some fundamentals of the work. Training and practice were shown by Miss McIlroy, club adviser, to be necessary to meet this qualification.

The saying, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" could not be applied to the Commercial Sampler Club, for the members held a very delightful Christmas party which was attended by Santa Claus, who distributed candy to all the members. The final social event of the club was a picnic hike held after school.

Folk Dancing

AWKWARD feet and awkward arms and hands flying through the air marked the first meetings of the Folk Dancing Club. The scenes presented at first were quite amusing even to the participants.

The Folk Dancing Club was organized to teach folk dances of the various nations of the world. Through the teaching of dancing the club aimed to develop gracefulness in place of awkwardness among its members. The idea was to learn how to move gracefully not only in dancing, but in walking as well.

The club divided into five groups. Each of these groups worked together as a unit. It was the work of the groups to keep together in the different dances to refrain from looking downward; to coordinate motion with music. Among the many dances thus practiced and mastered were the Swedish dance called the Bleeking, the Irish jig, and a Spanish dance. The club gave an exhibition of these dances during the National Music Week.

The Folk Dancing Club had for its officers Peggy Wolfe, president; Rosemary Hartsock, vice-president; Mary Miller, secretary; Marguerite Snyder, treasurer. These people capably filled their offices and were able to keep the club working harmoniously. The latter was quite a task for it was only natural for one to laugh at the awkward gestures made by the different members as they tried new dances for the first time. Eventually the girls realized that it was all fun and did not mind their fellow club members laughing at them.

Miss Olive Harley, the club adviser, proved to be a real inspiration to the girls. Although this type of club work was new to Miss Harley, she entered into the spirit of the work and immediately became as interested in learning the folk dances as the club members. Occasionally the club devoted its time to group singing or to being entertained by Miss Harley, whose singing was greatly appreciated.

Miss Eudora Meyers, one of the Dramatic Club advisers, occasionally assisted the girls in their dance projects by taking charge in Miss Harley's absence.

The members of the club feel that they have accomplished their purpose.

Holliday Club

VISITING the graves of the Holliday family may not seem either interesting or exciting to the average person, but the members of the Holliday Club found it to be so because they are well acquainted with the story of the tragic death of the Hollidays.

It is surprising how little is known about the history of our own town by the average citizen. Hollidaysburg and its environs have a background which is quite interesting.

The Holliday Club of 1936-'37 under the capable direction of Miss Nellie Berg has been making a study of the historical and business sections of the town.

The Blair County Court House was one of the first places to be visited by the club. The members were taken into all the offices and courtrooms where the person in charge explained the work done. Immediately following the trip to the court house, the telephone exchange was visited. The work of the exchange operator was explained in detail. Now the members can visualize the amount of work involved in making a telephone connection.

The post office was also visited by the club where the members saw how mail is separated, cancelled, and arranged for the mail carriers. An explanation of how the Postal Savings operates was given to the club.

Other visits which were planned included trips to the Blair County Jail, the Thermic Ice Plant, the Wright Laundry, the McLanahan Foundry and the Wilt Pasteurization Plant. The Portage Railway System, the Baker Museum, the Prince Gallitzin Spring and the old Allegheny Furnace were among the historical sites that the club members planned to visit. The girls of the club made a study of each place they planned to visit in order to appreciate the trips.

At the first meeting of the year, Alma Fox was elected to act as president of the club throughout the year. The vice-president chosen was Eloise Dodson. Florine Ginter capably filled the office of secretary, while the funds of the club were handled by the treasurer, Marjorie Croyle. Sylvia Crosson was chosen chaplain. Miss Nellie Berg acted as club adviser.

Debating Club

"MY WORTHY opponent has said that all electric utilities are ———." He also stated the fact that they ———," and on and on, back and forth, the debators throw their challenges at their opponents only to have them thrown right back again.

This past term was quite an interesting and unusual one in the history of debating. The organization started in November with the election of Harold Kunsman as president. Incidentally, Harold is quite an old cronie at debating, this being his fourth consecutive year in the club. Dale Bowser served in the capacity of vice-president. The secretary-treasurer was Dora Whittaker.

The club functioned as a reading and discussion group until after the Christmas holidays. January and February were used for writing speeches and organizing rebuttal material. The teams to represent the high school in the Forensic contest were chosen at the beginning of March. Those arguing in favor of the question, Resolved: that all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated, the subject which was selected by the National Forensic League as the question for debate, were Harold Kunsman and Raymond Reiser, with Doris Whittaker as alternate. The students opposing the issue were Dora Whittaker and Herman Reiser with Mary Ruth Hitchings as alternate.

The debating club had some unusual features this year in that the Whittaker twins, Dora and Doris, became varsity debaters and took opposite points of view in regard to the question. The Reiser brothers, Herman and Raymond, also took opposite sides of the issue.

Practice debates were held with Claysburg and Huntingdon. These were non-decision contests.

In the county contest, March 20, although the Hollidaysburg Affirmative team was victorious, the Tyrone debaters amassed enough points to be declared the county champions.

The teams received help from Mr. William Wade, vice-president of the Penn Central Light and Power Company and a school director of Hollidaysburg, through discussions with the teams and printed material he was able to furnish. Miss Reed and Mr. Stoudnour acted as the coaches of the teams and advisers to the Debating Club.

We Hear The Musicians Play and Sing

ATTENTION, everybody! Don't you see that baton? We members of Mr. Thompson's Senior Chorus are about to burst forth into song. Just listen!

A brand new organization, this Senior Chorus, but it has already promised to become one of the finest in the school. Nearly fifty boys and girls of the Senior High were members, and every one of us received real pleasure and enjoyment from it.

The first period on Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week the group met to learn songs and to learn the right way to sing them. This procedure required work, believe me, and many queer discords and flat notes filled the air until Mr. Thompson helped us dispel them! Also the undying patience of our long-suffering pianist, Frances Reese, did much to further our success. (Just ask Frances about all the fun she had trying to make the sound of breaking glass in one number! She had to strike almost every key on the keyboard!)

Of course, all of it wasn't fun. We worked hard on some of these numbers. At the beginning of the year we did four part work using Soprano, Tenor, Alto, and Bass voices. Then as we improved we brought in more parts.

And talk about versatility! Mr. Thompson made us sing everything from songs about buttercups to chants of the Russian church!

We did some outside work, also—singing carols for the community at Christmas time and participating in the Easter Dawn Service, Easter morning. The Operetta cast, also, was composed largely of chorus members.

"Tulip Time," the operetta, was one of the most outstanding events of the school year. The setting was in lovely flower-filled Holland, and the plot was intriguing and romantic enough to make the production a great success. The cast was composed of Sally Ling, Verna Moudy, Mary Brightbill, Mary McKillip, Jack Haller, Jimmy Martz, Hugh Selwitz, Lawrence Grossman, and Woodrow Newman.

There is another group of young vocalists in the high school who might some day be the future Nelson Eddys and Lauritz Melchiors of the Metropolitan.

We called ourselves the Boys' Glee Club, and although we didn't make very much fuss around the school, we really did some worth-while work.

We organized early in the year and elected for our officers Hugh Selwitz, president; Merrill Frazier, vice-president; and Harry Stevens, secretary-treasurer.

Most of the year we spent singing numbers for men's voices. Frances Reese nobly aided as our pianist. We had a very fine quartet composed of such marvelous vocalists as "Wacky" Frazier, Donald Downing, "Wootzy" Steele, and Dick Burtnett.

The Minstrels of 1937, sponsored by the Boys' League, had in its cast many Glee Club members. The Minstrel, written by Mr. Thompson, was one of the very best ever presented in this school. It was a real he-man show (no wimmin at all!), and was a lot of fun for everyone in it.

The Glee Club also felt quite proud of having won one of the three prizes given for selling the most tickets for the Minstrel. Maybe that was because we all had girl friends.

But, all joking aside, we do think our club was a mighty fine one and we advise any Senior High boy with vocal ambitions to join next year.

And now we think it high time that two other important musical organizations have their histories brought to light.

First, there's the Junior Orchestra. This group of Junior High School students was rather retiring this year but everyone knows that it has been working very hard so that some day it will become a Senior Orchestra!

Every sixth period on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays you could hear the Senior Orchestra practicing. They were preparing for the concerts and other entertainments in which they played so active a part.

This year they sent six members to the All-District orchestra at Towanda, one member to the All-State orchestra festival at Mt. Lebanon, four members to the All-District band festival at Canton, and two members to the All-State at Coatesville.

We Become Exponents of "Safety First"

"SCHOOL children run over by reckless driver." "Man loses eyesight when steel splinter pierces eye." Regardless of the numerous signs of caution, headlines such as those above continue to glare at us every time we pick up a newspaper. People continue to ignore advice given to offset dangerous practices. In order to impress students early in life with the importance of forming the habit of practicing safety first the Safety Council was established in our school this year with Walter Kearney as adviser.

Our school Safety Council is one of the many branches functioning under the direction of the National Safety Council which was originally organized as a co-operative non-profit making organization. The National Council first included in its membership railroads, insurance companies, engineers, and public officials as well as industrialists. It was planned as a clearing house of information of the best mechanical and educational methods of accident prevention. The Council now has three large divisions dealing with industrial problems, public safety and education. Its membership, more than 5,000, represents ten million workers in industry, public service companies, motor clubs, public schools, and other educational institutions.

The School Safety Council is composed of forty-six members, there being a boy and a girl representative from each home room. The Council meets the fourth Thursday of each month to plan safety programs to be carried out in the home rooms. Safety campaigns for the community were also devised by the Council. The Council was successful in having safety zones set aside for sled riders.

The Safety Council members are constantly on the alert for dangerous conditions in the school building, at home, and in the community. The members try to be examples of reasonable caution and good sense to the other students and try to use their influence to discourage the taking of foolish risks. The alertness of one member in reporting a cracked area of plaster probably prevented serious injury to some of his fellow students.

The officers in charge were: President, Carolyn Wagner; vice-president, Reynolds Merrits; secretary, Russell Irwin; treasurer, Joan Rooney; chaplain, Anna Jean Harry; adviser, Walter Kearney.

We Honor School Leaders

CHARACTER! Scholarship! Leadership! Service! Ruth, what boy or girl wouldn't be proud to be a member of the National Honor Society? Just think, we are two of the ten charter members of the society in our school. First, the office gave every senior a list of students who were in the upper third of the senior class and had them mark everyone they knew for the four above qualities. The ten having the highest scores and approved by the faculty were chosen.

Will you ever forget that senior high assembly when all those teachers were on the stage, and Mr. Loree read out our names and asked us to come up on the platform? Then each teacher spoke about some part of the National Honor Society. One explained the emblem; one told what the colors were and what they stood for; some talked about Character, Scholarship, Leadership and Service. Mr. Wade, the guest speaker, gave a most impressive talk to everyone in the senior high. We then stood up and repeated the pledge after Mr. Loree, wrote our names in the record book and received gold-ribbon arm bands with N. H. S. in blue letters on them.

Remember our first meeting? Harold Kunsman was elected president; Mary McKillip, vice-president; Pauline King, secretary; and Pax Gifford, treasurer.

Our first activity was to help at parents' night. Then we had a chapel program which included a brain-buster contest and silhouette guessing. It was presented in both Junior and Senior high assemblies. Dot Ritchey and Fred King were the chairmen of the program.

On March 8 we initiated fourteen students into the society. Harold Kunsman acted as chairman; Hugh Selwitz explained on what basis the students were elected for membership; Fred King, Pax Gifford and Mary McKillip all spoke on phases of the National Honor Society. Then Marjorie Mattern read the names of the new members and asked them to come forward. Those elected were: Shirley Ableson, Margaret Mary Burger, Marie Clapper, Jack Crites, Harry Deyarmin, William Dunn, Betty Lois Edwards, Genevieve Evans, Jeanne Fries, James Martz, Marand Snyder, David Steele, Marjorie Suter and Sylvia Wilt.

We Suffer Many Basketball Defeats

IN PLACE of the sharp commands of "cut back, cut out, hit them hard" of the football field came those of "pivot, cut, dribble, shoot" of the basketball court. Daily Coaches Chimente and Mentzer explained and demonstrated the intricacies of basketball on the "Y" court with the hope of developing a championship team.

With a veteran squad consisting of Pressel, King, Gifford, Haller, Kunsman and with added strength in the form of Wright, Brenner, Kins and Goodfellow from the 1935-'36 Jay Vee team prospects for a winning team were bright, but at no time did the team come up to the expectations of the coaches or of the student body. From the standpoint of team play the work of the team was one of the best in recent Hollidaysburg basketball history, but the team failed miserably in their attempts to convert shots from the field into points or to register many from the free throw line.

Opening the season at Mount Union the Chimentemen got off to a bad start when Coach Bowser's boys defeated them by a 44-22 score. Early in the game the 'Burg team gave indications of playing Mount Union on even terms, but soon were outdistanced by their clever opponents, who eventually finished the Mountain League schedule in a triple tie with Philipsburg and Lewistown.

A week later the local Golden Tigers were badly beaten at Philipsburg by a 29-12 score, but came back to press Lewistown before the latter won by a 25-18 total at Hollidaysburg.

After being defeated by what later proved to be the three best teams in the Mountain High League, Hollidaysburg traveled to Tyrone where again they met defeat.

The 'Burg quintet finally broke into the win column when they overcame a 13-6 lead the Huntingdon High Bearcats had obtained in their game at Huntingdon. The Hollidaysburg team put on a brilliant exhibition of ball handling during the fourth quarter of this game as they "froze" the ball for about six minutes. The final score showed a 19-16 win for Hollidaysburg.

With the Huntingdon victory spurring them on the 'Burg team next met and defeated Bellwood and then got revenge for the Tyrone defeat by amassing their highest number of points, 39, for the year, to the Orange and Black's 27.

The remainder of the season found the Blue and White team of Hollidaysburg again suffering defeat, except at Bellwood, when they again encountered the League leading teams.

Hollidaysburg, although not a winning team, gave some fine exhibitions of team play which brought plenty of praise from the local fans. With Wright, Brenner, Goodfellow and Kins back next year and with the new recruits from the winning Jay Vee team to replace the members of this year's team lost by graduation, Hollidaysburg's prospects for the 1937-'38 season appear to be a winning team, a real contender for the Mountain League Championship.

An additional aid to the teams of the future will be the completion of the new school gymnasium. Boys and girls from now on will have the benefit of physical education and no longer will the coaches have to teach corrective exercises during basketball practice. We look to the future with renewed hope for better basketball teams.

We Cheer Jay Vee Victories

THE whistle blows, the referee tosses the ball into the air, a lanky center leaps high and taps the ball to a forward who pivots and shoots a pass to a guard cutting for the basket. A loud cheer follows for the score reads: H-Burg Jay Vees 2, opponents 0. The above tells the story of the first play of the Hollidaysburg-Antis Jay Vee game, and it also gives one an idea of the caliber of this year's Junior Varsity team.

At the dawn of the 1936-'37 season Coach Mentzer poured into eager ears helpful words of advice. Heeding the words of their coach, the Jay Vees practiced long and hard in mastering the intricacies of pivoting, shooting, passing, and guarding, for the success of their season depended upon the perfection of these fundamentals.

Since Irwin and Winters were the only remaining members of last year's Jay Vees —the others having been advanced to the varsity squad—Coach Mentzer found it necessary to draw on new material to com plete his team. A corps of promising material reported daily, and from this group the coach picked several boys to complete the squad. Conrad, Gillette, Green, Lusardi, Barroner, Dunn, and Lyons with Winters and Irwin, were those who gave their best that the "little" Golden Tigers might have a successful season.

With such spirited and determined players as these on the squad it is little wonder that the final tabulation of their season's efforts showed nine wins against six losses. It is also easy to understand how the Jay Vees finished second in the Mountain High Junior Varsity League even when competing with such strong teams as Philipsburg, Lewistown, Huntingdon, Mount Union, Tyrone, and Bellwood.

No doubt the varsity basketball lineups of the future year, will have the names of more than one of the 1936-'37 Junior Varsity Quintet. The experience and knowledge these players gained during this year will prove an invaluable aid when they are up against stiffer competition as members of the varsity.

We Watch The Boys' League At Work

A VISITOR to Hollidaysburg High School during the afternoon of the second Thursday of the month might easily wonder why all the boys of the school are going into the auditorium. Following the boys, the individual would soon learn that the Boys' League is in session as Earl Pressel, the president, calls the meeting to order.

What is the purpose of the League? What do the boys do the days the League does not meet? Questions such as the ones just mentioned might arise in the visitor's mind after he learns the purpose of the monthly meeting of the boys. The Boys' League is an organization whose purpose is to help the boys develop those worth-while interests they may have and to stimulate their interest in other worth-while activities. The League sponsors clubs to give the boys an opportunity to find, through actual contact, some interest that might be developed into an avocation, or perhaps a vocation. These clubs meet each Thursday except on the day there is a general meeting. The clubs are exploratory in nature in as much as the boys are urged to change clubs each year in order to find new interests.

The League as a whole meets monthly to discuss problems that are common to all boys. Usually a guest speaker is invited to come and discuss something of interest and value to boys. Among the speakers during our present school year, C. Roy Keller, Hollidaysburg, spoke on the subject, "Firearms, Their Use and Safety." Reverend Frederick Eyster of the St. John's Reformed Church, gave us an inspiring Christmas message. "The Making of a Hero" was the subject chosen by Reverend Fred Norris of the Hicks Memorial Church of Duncansville. Arthur O. Hutchinson, Hollidaysburg, spoke on "Life Insurance."

The Boys' League again sponsored a minstrel show in order to raise funds to meet the expenses of putting the club pictures in the Chimrock.

Nature Study Club

"Knowledge never learned of schools,
Of the wild bee's morning chase,
Of the wild flower's time and place,
Flight of fowl and habitude
Of the tenants of the wood;
How the tortoise bears his shell,
How the woodchuck digs his cell
And the ground-mole sinks his well;
How the robin feeds her young,
How the oriole's nest is hung;
Where the whitest lilies blow,
Where the freshest berries grow,
Where the ground-nut trails its vine,
Where the wood-grape's clusters shine;
Of the black wasp's cunning way,
Mason of his walls of clay,
And the architectural plans
Of gray hornet artisans."

Thus Whittier in his poem, "The Barefoot Boy," focuses attention to many of the things that may be learned in the great outdoors.

If you have never come to think of nature as a great teacher and have never been inspired by the wonders and the beauty of life, then you have missed much of the joy of living. Every nook and cranny of the outdoors has a story all its own. Regardless of what type of story you like best—romance, tragedy or the eternal triangle — you may find it if you but delve into nature.

It is the purpose of the Nature Study Club to learn more about life as it actually is and to appreciate more fully our natural environment.

Through our club programs we have obtained some of the "knowledge never learned of schools" by having various members of the club relate their expe-riences received while hunting, fishing, or hiking. We have observed the beauty of nature and also the viciousness of it as we noted the struggle for existence that is continuously going on among the plants and animals. In material gathered from near-by ponds and streams we have watched the wriggler develop into a mosquito and the tadpole into a frog.

The Nature Study Club is proud of the fact that every one of the fifty-four members made at least one appearance on the programs presented. The officers of the club are: Bill Barroner, president; Kenneth Downing, vice-president; Jim Thompson, secretary; Joe Reed, chaplain.

Astronomy Club

"WHY did not someone teach me the constellations and make me at home in the starry heavens, which are always overhead and which I don't half know to this day?"—Thomas Carlisle.

Beginning hundreds of years before Christ, from the old Greeks, Babylonians and Egyptians to our present day, there has been a great parade of astronomers. Pythagoras, Aristarchus, Ptolemy, Copernicus, Eratosthenes, Foucalt, Galileo, Hipparchus, Aristotle, Barnard, Lowell, James and many other great astronomers have each given us his astronomical theories concerning the parade of constellations in our heavens.

This year the Astronomy Club contained none of the above men, but it did contain a group of fifty boys asking the same question as that asked by Thomas Carlisle. In order to answer this question, maps of the sky were drawn for each month by each member. The stories of mythology underlying the various constellations were then explained. Individual stars in the various constellations were studied as to magnitude, color, age, distance from the earth, and speed.

In contemplating the stars, which at first glance seem sprinkled at random over the sky, it is natural to group them into geometric figures—triangles, squares and winding rows—and the imagination can easily people the sky with more elaborate forms. The members of the Astronomy Club found that the ancients had named forty-eight star groups or constellations. These groups were named mostly for objects or heroes of mythology. In the study of the groups the club members noted that there was little resemblance between the name and the constellation; for example, Pegasus, the winged horse, is most easily recognized by a square of four stars; Andromeda, the chained maiden, is represented chiefly by a nearly straight row of three stars, and Ursa Major, the bear into which the nymph Callisto was transformed, appears as a Big Dipper.

The Astronomy Club had for its officers the first semester James Martz, president; Walter Sellers, vice-president; John O'Brien, secretary-treasurer; George Funk, chaplain, while William Goodfellow, Russell Irwin, Elmer Dell and John Hite filled the respective offices the second semester.

Science Club

PUNGENT odors emanating from room 206 during activities period on Thursdays again announce that the embryonic scientists are once more prying into the mysteries of chemistry and physics.

Chemistry and physics hold so much fascinating material that the members of this club eagerly look forward to its meetings. The program committee, working with Mr. Harry Henshaw, the club adviser, always has some worth-while experiment to perform for the group. The experiments are performed with the idea of stimulating the interests of the boys in the higher sciences and presenting the practical application of the laws of chemistry and physics. Among the many experiments performed were the following:

Electroplating. In this experiment we learned how to put metal layers on such articles as knives and forks.

Electrolysis of Water. Water was separated into the two gases, oxygen and hydrogen, by passing electricity through the water. After the separation of the gases several experiments involving oxygen and hydrogen were performed. We also learned something about the explosive quality of hydrogen.

Soil Testing. The testing of soil proved to be a very instructive experiment. We tested soil for acidity and also made tests to determine the presence of nitrogen, potassium, and phosphate compounds.

Butter Fat Test. A simple but effective way to determine the butter fat content of milk was shown to the club. Samples of milk were treated with sulfuric acid which dissolves everything but the butter fat. After the latter was collected the percentage present in the milk was computed.

Coal Gas Production. An experiment to show the production of coal gas was performed. Besides the gas, coke, coal tar and ammonia were collected as by-products. Through research reading we found that coal also produces many other products.

Electrolysis. We obtained hydrogen, chlorine, and lye by the electrolysis of brine during one of our programs. This experiment was the same as the electrolysis of water except that brine was substituted for water.

The officers were Henry Ford, president; Milton Stewart, vice-president; Richard Long, secretary; Blaine Long, chaplain.

Sportsman Club

TALL stories and sportsmen, whether they be fishermen, hunters or boat addicts, seem to go together like ham and eggs, bread and butter, or doughnuts and coffee. The sportsmen of the Boys' League are no exception to this rule, for they were also found to be the possessors of some tall tales. One of the best of the stories told was the following: "My gun was so high-powered that I loaded the shells with salt in order to preserve the game until I reached it, as I shot from one mountain to the other."

Many were the stories like the above that the members of this club told. However, they played a very minor role in the club's program throughout the year.

After the resignation of Mr. Harry Diehl, club adviser, Mr. Donald Wolfe took charge. Under the capable counsel of these two men many interesting programs were given. The Sportsman Club had a great variety of subjects about which to center programs. Hunting, fishing, trapping, and such sports as baseball, football and basketball were among the subjects discussed. The aim of these discussions was threefold: First, to help the boys develop an interest in some worth-while activity; second, to give the members a knowledge of sports in order that they might enjoy them better from a spectator's viewpoint and be able to discuss each with some degree of intelligence; third, to teach the group the code of a sportsman.

The value of some worth-while activity for leisure time cannot be overemphasized. With the advent of the eight-hour work day and the six-hour day just in the offing one must think of putting his leisure time to some interesting and worthy use. It is also important that we in America understand various forms of sport and the intricacies of each, for nowhere do people enjoy watching sporting games as we do. Thousands of dollars are spent each year by the American public on equipment to play or for admission to games. Fair play, decency and honesty in competition in athletics and in field and stream make up the code of the sportsman.

Hi-Y Club

PREPAREDNESS for war and a scheme to take the profit out of war so far as we in the United States are concerned was the gist of a talk given by Mr. Frank Reiser, local attorney, to the Hi-Y Club at one of its meetings during the past school year. In his talk Mr. Reiser advocated a universal draft of men and industries in the event of a future war. Mr. Reiser also stressed the importance of all boys and girls being prepared to make some contribution to society.

Mr. Reiser's address was one of many heard by the club as it followed a yearly program designed to teach the club members more about leading a clean moral and physical life.

Among other features of the year was the showing of two moving pictures. One of these dealt with plant and animal life. Many of the group had heard of carnivorous plants, but doubted the authenticity of such reports. In one reel of film shown by Mr. Dan C. Pitts, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., the members saw such plants in action. In addition to fly-catching plants, corals, chameleons and other interesting animals were seen. Other reels dealt with the World War. These pictures visualized the almost unbelievable horrors of war. The destruction of villages and cities was shown. The wreckage left after heavy bombardments by cannon and airplanes could be seen.

Mr. William A. Herman, a local herpetologist, explained to the club the origin of many of the fallacies which a great many people have in regard to snakes. Mr. Herman gave the club members a different viewpoint in regard to reptiles than many of the group had before his lecture. The speaker endeavored to create an interest in reptile study among the boys and to dispel some of the fear which people have of snakes.

It has been the purpose of the Hi-Y Club to create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community higher standards of Christian character. In his talk, "A Vision for Youth," Reverend Stacy Capers inspired the boys to keep this purpose before them.

Health Club

THE importance of good health has been stressed through the ages. The old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise," shows that at least one of the rules for maintaining good health was very early recognized. Realizing the importance of having a sound, healthy body, sixty boys joined the Health Club under the supervision of Richard Mentzer, to learn how they might develop healthy, robust bodies.

Since the terms athlete and health have almost been synonymous the boys of the club decided to study the relation of athletics and health education. Why are athletes usually healthy people was one question that the club used as a basis for discussion.

Club members had often heard of the value of exercise, but not until they made a study of exercise and its effect upon the body did they realize just how much harm exercise of the wrong type might cause. The production of carbon dioxide, the consumption of glycogen, the yielding of heat and energy were some of the results found to occur due to exercise.

The question of player protection and why some parents would not permit their children to participate in athletics held the attention of the boys. Club members admitted in their meetings that they had given little or no thought as to just why certain protective devices in athletic equipment had been constructed as shown by samples brought into various discussions.

As a result of the study of exercise and player protection the club members learned how to exercise in a rational way, beneficial to participants, without overindulging in vigorous activity for the purpose of assuring growth.

At one meeting the boys learned that motives result in accomplishments, while lack of them brings failure. As an illustration, athletes who had to put forth very little effort to make the team were shown to be the very ones that failed to reach high goals, while those that worked hard were usually rewarded.

Homer Winters, president; James Dannals, vice-president; Cloyd Shaffer, chaplain, and Eugene Martz, secretary-treasurer, were the officers of the club.

Athletic Club

WITH Bill Garland, president, swinging the gavel in place of swinging around the end, the Athletic Club, formerly the H-Club, had a year of very interesting programs. Merle Berkheimer, vice-president, ably assisted Garland in the club work as he had done before on the football field. Boots Lee, secretary, now kept records instead of breaking them as he had done in the past. Willard Emeigh of the famous "Me 'n Eagle" combination, acted as chaplain for the organization.

Former athletes of the school may have wondered why the change in name from the H-Club to that of the Athletic Club. Due to the rapid increase in school population it became necessary that all of the clubs be open for all of the boys who showed an interest in them in order that no one club would have just a few members and the others be overloaded and that the interests of all be met if possible. The H-Club had the limitation of only those who earned a letter H be eligible, so as a result the club was not meeting the demands of all the boys who wanted to know more about athletics, but could not win a letter. To overcome this limitation the club's name and purpose was changed.

The Athletic Club had for its purpose the creating of a greater appreciation of the various athletic games and the players involved by having an understanding of the fundamentals of the games and the work of each participant.

The program committee appointed by President Garland focused the attention of the club members on the game of football during the early autumn meetings of the organization. Boys who had played football explained to the others just what a spectator should look for when watching a football game. Football programs ended when the club selected an All-American team and also an All-Opposition team.

Basketball with its new rules, track records and Olympic champions, and the various other sports gave the club much material for programs and has created a greater appreciation for all sports among the club members.

Current Events Club

STATE, national, and world affairs current in the daily news provided the Current Events Club with interesting material to carry out a well-devised plan made to present the news to the club members. In as much as the organization had for its purpose to read and to digest the news happenings of the world, a definite schedule was devised which offered a fairly complete coverage. Starting with the report of the foreign editor, who had previously been assigned that phase of the program, the program moved to the next boy who had been assigned to cover the political phase of the news.

The first focal point on the political front was Washington. Next in order, happenings on the political front at Harrisburg were brought to attention. Local news followed, but try as the boys did, seldom were they successful in keeping the summary of local happenings from sounding gossipy.

At the conclusion of the review of the world news, the club members became commentators. Each speaker was beset by questions concerning his report. The boys were happy to agree with the speaker, but never failed to thunder their disapproval when they disagreed. As the boys drew conclusions from the various reports, they were often reminded that those conclusions had to be based on facts, not opinions. Robert Malone, the club president, and a firm believer in forming opinions on the news quickly, was more than once brought to account by his colleagues for failing to base his opinions on facts.

Secretary Dean Newman and Sydney Eboch never lost any time in expressing their interpretation of the news, and more often than not they saw different news in the same story. John Snyder and Ralph Reed were collectors of oddities in the news, and very seldom did they fail to present something amusing.

The April 15 meeting was devoted to entertainment. Instead of gathering news the club members gathered pastries, sandwiches, and ice cream for this meeting. The boys celebrated their success in winning a prize for selling tickets for the Minstrel Show that had been sponsored by the Boys' League.

Hobby Club

STAMP collectors, wood carvers, students of bird lore, Indian relic collectors, coin collectors and boys with many other interests compose the Hobby Club.

The Hobby Club is different from any other boys' club in the school. The members do not have one common group interest. Each member may have a different hobby and because of it the programs are usually very interesting.

The origin of the hobbies we have is just about as interesting as the hobby itself. A hike along the river where one may accidentally find an Indian arrow head may be the impetus necessary to start a boy collecting Indian relics. The finding of a foreign coin may make a coin collector out of a boy as it did Robert Sellers. Bob now has coins from practically all parts of the world. We were shown Canadian, British, Chinese, Japanese, Spanish and other coins by Bob during one of our club meetings.

There is a wide variety of hobbies represented by our club members. Hayes Calvin burns designs into wood. He gave us a demonstration during one club period. Craig Walls is a coin collector. He gave us a test on the nationality and value of his stamps. Indian monetary exchange holds the interest of James Kelly. Stamps from all parts of the world were seen the day the club devoted its meeting to stamp collections. Among our stamp collectors are Joe Drass, Richard Baird and Elvin Leibegott.

We are not all collectors. Many of our members have as their hobby the study of nature. During the autumn season we took hikes in order that we might make a study of birds and their migration. We also made a study of the other animals we saw, such as squirrels, rabbits and pheasants. Some of our groups are able to identify most of the birds found in this locality. The identification of wild flowers has become the hobby of several of our groups.

The following served as officers: Homer Winters, president; James Dannals, vice-president; Eugene Martz, secretary-treasurer; Cloyd Shaffer, chaplain; Mr. Halferd Wertz acted as our adviser.

We Break Track Records

LAST call for the mile! Last call for the mile! The loud-speaker spreads the words over all of the field as the candidates assemble at the starting line. On your mark! The runners relax in their holes. Get set! Their bodies suddenly become tense, every nerve strained to hear the bark of the gun as early as possible. Bang! Off they go down the track sprinting for position, each one anxious to get next to the rail, waiting for the other fellow to set the pace, or else taking the lead himself. Finally a boy spurts home to break the tape, a winner.

The above paragraph might have been the first paragraph of the story of Harry McLain's thrilling victory in the State College invitation meet, in which he set a new track record for the mile, in negotiating the distance in 4 minutes, 49 seconds. Or it might have told of the half-mile at this same track meet, when Francis Winters broke the tape first in the half mile. Aided by these first place winners, the Golden Tigers finished in second place, only four and one-half points behind State College. Other first place winners at this meet were Joe Condron, whose leap of 5 feet 9½ inches gave him a tie for first place in the high jump; Bill Garland, who set a new meet record when he hurled the javelin 162 feet 9 inches; Jim Leamer, whose 42 foot toss of the shotput was tops in that event, and Merle Frazier, who won the 220-yard low hurdles.

However, five first places gave the team a total of only 30 points, and thus other 'Burg trackmen, such as Gifford, Pressel, Kins, and McGee figured prominently in the grossing of a 44-point total.

In preparation for this big meet, Coach Mentzer's men had participated in several contests before this. They defeated Roaring Spring and Tyrone in dual meets, and in a night track meet at Dysart with Tyrone and State College they gave the State College team a close fight in finishing second.

We Organize Quill and Scroll Chapter

SAY, what is this Quill and Scroll I've been hearing so much about? How can you join it? What do you do? Well, the Quill and Scroll is an international honorary society for high school journalists. To be eligible to membership a student must be of junior or senior classification, or past graduate he must be in the upper third of his class in general scholastic standing at the time of his election; he must have done superior work in writing, editing, or business management; he must be recommended by the supervisor; he must be approved by the national secretary-treasurer.

How many are in the Quill and Scroll this year and how did they get in?

This year there were only four of us with Miss Harpster as the adviser. It was funny when we went to organize because there was a member for every office.

The results of the election are: Dorothy Ritchey, president; Hugh Selwitz, vice-president; Marjorie Mattern, secretary, and Harold Kunsman, treasurer. We were all on the H-Burger staff so we collected all the articles we had written and selected the one article we considered the best we had ever written. Then Miss Harpster wrote to the international secretary of the organization, sending a sample of our work to be approved by the secretary.

How did you get those gold pins you wear? Do you have dues?

We received our pins after our work had been approved by the secretary and we had paid our dues, which were two dollars per member. The money pays for the pins and a year's subscription to the Quill and Scroll magazine. The magazine contains news articles about or taken from school newspapers all over the world.

When was our chapter of the Quill and Scroll organized? What is the purpose of one of these clubs? I would like to become a member.

Our chapter was organized April 22, 1931. The purpose of the Quill and Scroll organization is to improve the style and technique of journalistic writing for high school students, and to set a higher standard of journalism.

We Edit The Chimrock

HAVE you seen the new Chimrock? How does it look? Is it any different? Is there anything new? These are a few of the many questions one hears when the new Chimrock arrives. Rarely do the students who ask these questions stop to realize the work and worry the staff goes through in order to publish the book on time—a book which satisfies the student body. Go back to the times when the following appeared:

Notice—Editorial staff meeting, Tuesday, 4 P. M., in the Chimrock room. Advertising staff will meet Thursday.

Notices such as the above bring forgotten assignments to the attention of staff members, and cause them to wonder what the adviser, Griff Jones, will have to say.

The first few meetings are used to become acquainted with the dummy which was prepared by Marge Mattern, editor-in-chief, and her assistant, Pauline King.

"I'll never be able to write up all these club histories," moans Girls' Club Editor Harriet Kitzinger.

"What about Verna and me with these numerous music assignments?" queries Mary McKillip, music editor.

Although Genevieve Evans, class editor, David Steele, Boys' Club editor, and Harold Kunsman, sports editor, don't say much, they all have their duties to fulfill.

What teacher hasn't heard, "I won't be in class today; I'm going to sell advertising space for the Chimrock," from the advertising staff, which consists of Raymond Reiser, John Matthews, Dick Burnett, Dick Dutrow, and Doris Whittaker. Getting the "ad's" has proved that the above-mentioned staff members have perseverance and sales ability. Besides selling the advertisements, the staff arranges all the advertising pages.

Any sixth or seventh period one could find Elizabeth Wallace and Olive Piper in the Chimrock room, surrounded by papers with numbers marching all over each sheet—bills, check books, receipts, books wherein the subscription money is recorded, and other problems which are bound to confront the business managers. Through it all the girls held their own and balanced the books.

Dora Whittaker, Myrtle Shaffer, Anna Mary Douglas, Gladys Grove, Marie Clapper and Helen Corbin were the efficient typists that served on the staff this year.

We Produce "The Tower Room Mystery"

"JACK, listen to that dog howling; it's a sure sign of death."

"Don't be silly, Sis; it's a sure sign somebody locked the dog out and he wants in."

Do you remember those lines in the senior play? The play was a three-act farce, "The Tower Room Mystery," written by Robert St. Clair.

Richard Akers as Jack Chalice, a young American chap who inherited the haunted castle, certainly played his part well. Oh, yes, and Kate, his sister, portrayed by Marjorie Mattern, surely could scream. If she wasn't sitting on a "spider as big as a cat," she was eating poisoned sandwiches or being kissed by the vampire.

Myra Vernon, a girl of mystery, played by Doris Whittaker, not only found the treasure she was looking for, but got Jack Chalice also.

Mary McKillip carried off the role as Mrs. Barrett, a crazy woman, splendidly. When she chased Jack around the room, calling him Fifi, her long-lost little poodle dog, the scene was amusing.

That was quite a modest proposal Bill Garland, alias Kennedy Elsworth, made to Jack. Imagine Kate's feelings when Ken plans to have Jack write a mystery play, and then says "If it's a success, I'll take your sister off your hands."

I don't see how Dick Burtnett, who was Andrew, an old deaf mute, could be so quiet.

The characters of Matilda, an old cook, Emily, a young servant, and Martin, were played by Sally Ling, Dorothy Ritchey and Russell Carrier.

Who will forget Wacky Frazier as the Master? Gee! That laugh of his was enough to make anyone shiver. The master certainly had a reputation. Imagine having eighty-nine wives and killing them with the "Kiss of Death." No wonder Myra and Kate refused to go with him. Although Beatrice (Doris Johnson) and Antoinette (Margery Mallegan) didn't seem to object.

I liked the part where the master tells Myra she is very beautiful and shall be his first wife; then he turns to Kate and says she shall be his second choice. Kate gets angry and says, "I won't play second fiddle to anyone."

It certainly was a fine performance.

We Write Our History

AS WE record our class history, we are completing twelve years of school life that has been both interesting and eventful. Each year has contributed its share of joys and sorrows, but perhaps our senior year has been the most eventful one for us, for it was during that year that we wrote a new history in Hollidaysburg High School by the formation of organizations new to the school and also by our deeds both in school and on the athletic field.

The officers who led us through our senior year were Paxson Gifford, president; Raymond Reiser, vice-president; Pauline King, secretary; Harold Kunsman, treasurer.

The formation of a chapter of the National Honor Society with ten of our class as charter members marked a new era in our school. Scholarship and leadership were now being honored through the recognition of those qualities by admission of one possessing them into the society. The Safety Council with Carolyn Wagner as president was also organized this year.

Four representatives of our class, Hugh Selwitz, Sally Ling, Raymond Reiser and Marjorie Mattern, with Miss Smiley as chaperone, attended a Student Council conference at York, Pennsylvania. As a result of their visit the Senior Council was chosen to solve the problems that confronted the class as a whole.

The party that we sponsored was quite eventful. We transformed the school into a pine forest decorated with varied colored lights and mistletoe. The program of the evening provided some type of entertainment for all attending.

On the athletic field and on the "gym" floor our class helped to write a successful year in athletics. Twelve of our boys ended their football careers as they helped to defeat all opponents except one. Three of the boys, Paxson Gifford, Earl Pressel and Jack Haller, were chosen on the All-Western Conference football team. These boys with their teammates gave us one thrill after another as they shone on the gridiron.

In basketball, although we did not win many games, our boys again showed their athletic ability. Fred King was our star as he played with Earl Pressel, Pax Gifford, Jack Haller, Harold Kunsman, also members of our class. John Matthews wrote a new history for managers. John served the teams and school as a student football manager for four years. Clifford Alberts acted as basketball manager.

In track and field events our boys have broken records in the past, but no results for the senior year were available as this history was being written.

Dwight Stuckey was our shining light in the musical field. Dwight became a member of the All-State Orchestra. Nelson Steele, the high-stepping drum major, was also a member of our class.

"The Tower Room Mystery," the play presented as the annual senior class play, gave us a chance to display our dramatic talent. "Bill" Garland and "Wacky" Frazier surprised us all as they acted their parts.

As we think of our school successes, we think of the future with the words of Longfellow in mind:

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

Why You Should Own Your Own Home

Real estate always has a value. It is a pleasure.

It gives you a better standing in the community in which you live.

It establishes credit which we all need throughout life.

It gives a sense of security and makes you feel you are a part of the community.

What you spend in your own home you are spending for yourself.

It does away with rent receipt files that are of no value.
